To whom it may concern. I am a law abiding gun owner. There should be no rules that limit your right to protect yourself or anyone with you when you feel that great bodily harm may be inflicted upon you. Any person that is attempting to cause that harm to you should lose their right to another who is trying to protect themselves. No questions!

If you enter another person's dwelling unlawfully you should forfeit any rights of harm a person in that dwelling may inflict upon you. This should be a right of any American to protect themselves in their home.

As far as the amount of firearms owned or purchased by an individual it should be their responsibility to determine the amount and no restrictions should be placed on that.

Thank you for your time and vote.
